

Margaret Thatcher: Interviews 1975-1990 (BBC Archive Voices - Original Recorded Interviews)

A fascinating compilation of BBC Radio and TV interviews with Margaret Thatcher. In interviews ranging from 1975 to 1990, Margaret Thatcher talks about being a woman in politics, her response to the media attacks she received in the early days of her career, and the importance of wearing the right clothes. She also recalls her memories of home, including working in her father's grocery shop, and the radio and TV programs she enjoyed. Also mentioned are her first meeting with future husband Denis, her worries about her son Mark when he went missing in the Sahara desert, and her interest in science. Lastly, she discusses her stamina and her worst moment as prime minister during the Falklands War.
