

Our White Boy (Sport in the American West)

At the outset of summer break in 1959, Texas Tech senior Jerry Craft had no more enticing options than to stay home and help on the family ranch so he telephoned an offer to play for a semipro baseball club he had never heard of and came as a welcome surprise.

But Craft was in for an even bigger surprise when he reported for tryout and discovered he had been recruited for the West Texas Colored League. Wichita Falls/Graham Stars manager Carl Sedberry persuaded Craft to put aside his misgivings and pitch for the Stars. Despite the derision of black teammates, fans, and opponents, and his own trepidation, that white boy took the mound to close a rousing victory in his first game. At home and on the road in segregated Texas, Craft saw discrimination firsthand and from every side. Yet out of his two seasons with the Stars comes an unlikely story of respect, character, humor, and ultimately friendship as the teammates pulled together to succeed in a game they loved.

For the writer as a white middle class boy this is a tough question to ask: why is sailing as much a sport of the mind as it is the body, yet if your face of sorts are from Europe, North America and our former colonies such as New England for all things Western there will be a certain sailing scene there too.
